Self-compassion is not just a good idea, it is something one can do.... a powerful way to alleviate suffering that is accessible to anyone at any moment. It can be learned and practiced, and it is not rocket science

Mindful Self-Compassion (MSC) is the ability to live our lives and face challenges while we support and motivate ourselves in the same way we would for a good friend.

The MSC course teaches concrete, practical skills for daily life that will help you to respond to difficult moments with kindness and understanding while you also become more able to motivate yourself, stand up for yourself and set limits.

This enhanced version of MSC training includes 10 sessions:

- 9 core course sessions X 2.5 hours each (23 hours total) on Mondays at 17:30 ICT (Thailand time) starting Monday Sept. 9, 2024, plus
- A 2.5-hour retreat session after the 6th session (see schedule below),
- Plus additional practice related to Fierce Self-Compassion

It's proven to help! The MSC program integrates cutting-edge insights from neuroscience, positive psychology, and human development. More than 1,000 peer-reviewed studies demonstrate that self-compassion is strongly associated with increased emotional wellbeing and resilience in many ways including less anxiety, depression and stress, better maintenance of healthy habits such as diet and exercise, and more satisfying personal relationships. And it's easier than you think.

Why Online? Taking the course online empowers you to:

- 😊 Participate from the convenience and comfort of your own home, and
- 😊 Be deeply engaged with interactive, experiential exercises, while
- 😊 Connecting with a diverse community of participants from across Asia-Pacific,
- 😊 Learn from the experts: this course is led by Siri Chandler and Ben Weinstein, PhD, two of Asia-Pacific's most experienced and skilled teachers of secular mindfulness and self-compassion.
